

International Programs

*International program team that developed March 2004 document:
Mohammed Amin (student), Donna Anderson, Patricia Bromley,
Joyce Clifton, Barb Daus, Viet Ha, Susan Hansen, Wally Iselin, Sally Moss, Sue Price, Lisa Riedle, Marcia Sola, and David VanBuren*

Mission Statement

UW-Platteville, through its international programs, seeks to ensure access to quality international study experiences that strengthen academic learning and promote intercultural understanding.

Statements of Purpose

Through its initiatives to provide opportunities to study internationally to UW-Platteville students, the University will:

- promote international study experiences that are consistent with the mission of UW-Platteville and that are designed to result in a student's academic, personal, and professional development;
- provide international study experiences of exceptional academic content and instruction including appropriate and regular program review and assessment;
- ensure that international study experiences accommodate a wide range of academic program areas and include appropriate evaluation of academic progress;
- provide international study experiences in diverse regions of the world;
- ensure that international study experiences are well integrated into the local community, encourage immersion of the student into the local culture, and encourage study of the local language;
- integrate the international study experience into a student's academic program, to the fullest extent possible,
- develop and implement procedures by which returning students can actively contribute to international awareness and programming on campus;

As a part of its efforts to internationalize the campus, the University will:

- expand the opportunities for students, faculty, staff, and administrators to collaborate internationally;
- actively recruit international students to study at UW-Platteville and provide appropriate and specialized support services for those students; and
- recognize and utilize the special knowledge and experience of international students, faculty, staff, and administrators to develop the global perspective of the UWP community.