

What is the Confucius Institute at UW-Platteville?

The Confucius Institute is a collaborative project between the University of Wisconsin-Platteville, the Office of Chinese Language Council International (Hanban), and the South-Central University for Nationalities in Wuhan, China.

The Institute is part of an international network of over 300 Confucius Institutes around the world dedicated to enhancing the understanding of Chinese language and culture.

As the only Confucius Institute in the State of Wisconsin, we have a statewide responsibility to serve Wisconsin's citizens through outreach activities for community members of all ages, educators, and businesses.

About Our Youth Program

Youth classes at the Confucius Institute use a variety of visual and interactive methods to teach spoken Mandarin language and Chinese customs. Weekly lessons include words and phrases, songs, and crafts. Classes for older students emphasize language instruction.

About Our Instructor

Ms. Mei Reeder has extensive experience working as a Chinese language translator. She also holds certificates in early childhood education and has worked in preschools and elementary schools.

Ms. Reeder is a native of Taiwan. She currently resides in Platteville with her husband and two sons.
