On January 23, 2012, the Assessment Oversight Committee (AOC) conducted an assessment review of the Project Management program. Professor Bill Haskins presented the report. Haskins noted that the program went through accreditation in 2008 and it provides an in-depth report to the grad council every year. Haskins explained that four tools are used to evaluate the program:

1. Portfolio of Student Writing
2. Evaluation of students as they complete Capstone Research Paper
3. Post-Graduate Questionnaire
4. Attainment of the Project Management Professional credential

Haskins noted that several changes were made to the program because of their assessment results, including one new course and the redesigning of several existing courses. Among the areas of concern, the issue of diversity remains a problem that they are trying to improve. They are also concerned about the low number of responses to some of their surveys and are looking for ways to ensure that students complete the post-graduate questionnaire, for example.

The AOC encourages Project Management in its efforts to address diversity issues and its attempts to increase participation in its surveys. Overall, the AOC is satisfied with the Project Management assessment report.
