Closing the loop in Graduate Programs

Presented to the Higher Learning Commission

December 5, 2006

Master of Science, Project Management

Changes made to program as a result of assessment feedback:

1) By way of the graduate survey, a small number of students have indicated an interest in pursuing a terminal degree after finishing the MSPM program. For those students, a more research-focused approach to the master's degree made sense, so the program developed and received approval for a Thesis Research course, with a course in research methods currently under development.

2) Student surveys following the COMM 7330 Org Communication course have revealed a consistent logistical difficulty with certain aspects of the course. In particular, the requirement for a live communication audit was troublesome, so the faculty author of the course undertook a revision in 2005 which included a version of this assignment which was more workable.
